

Data science definition: a person who is able to take existing data sources and create new ones so that they can extract useful information and insights, using their knowledge.

Data science is used for creating: predictions, recommendations, optimizations, forecasts, recognition and more.